THE LEGEND CONTINUES.

THE LEGEND

NORTH SIDE HIGH SCHOOL 475 E. STATE ST. FT. WAYNE, IN 46805 VOL. 57

Legends Show Pride

Traditions estabilished at North Side reflect the pride and honor of the school and the community. Since its doors first opened in 1927, North has displayed red and white, one meaning life and love and the other symbolizing peace and purity. The community and staff have extended loyalty and trust to the student body. Their mascost, Chief Mac, has remained a favorite attraction. Other traditions carry on the spirit: No graduating class would be complete without a senior gift. Seniors set specific examples for those who follow. Just as there were homecoming, spirit week, sessions-the list goes on and on-so the legend continues.

Students show affections

A quick kiss, or walking hand in hand or arm in arm were "affections" frowned upon by the administration. Students were ask to save the "spitswapping" for after school hours.

Students learnt biology, algebra, and English as well as learning to get along with others.

Throughout the day students could have been seen in groups standing within the halls, talking about anything from homework to favorite rock groups, demonstraited a warm informal atmosphere. Climate surveys reinforced what everyone already knew: North Side is a pleasant, happy place.

Juniors Laura Sauer and Heather Hoffmann find those embarrassing moments easy to cope with.

Students scramble to get last minute homework together.

Students enjoy summer fun

Summer: the season between spring and autumn comprising, in the Northern Hemisphere, usually the month of June, July, and August.

But that's not what a North Side student would tell you. You would probably get something like, "Band practice from 6 to 8 every night," "running 2 or 3 miles every morning at 8 o'clock." Or if you're the partying kind of Redskin, it's Van Halen, Huey Lewis and the News, Scorpions, Yes, and Ozzy.

Then there's the working class 'Skin with a full or part-time job, mowing lawns, or, doing any other odd jobs available.

The rest of us could be found at a lake cottage or taking a cool dip at North Side Park pool.

An unknown junior shows his best side while falling into the drink.

Junior Brian Mettler pushes himself to the limit to try to reach the finish line first.

Roller coasters are still the favorite ride at Cedar Point.

The Demon Drop was a big hit last summer.

Some of the cross country team spent their summer days at camp enjoying the delicacy of fine foods.

'Skins occupy spare time

"What's to do in Ft. Wayne?" There were as many things to do as there were people to do them. Whether it was going to the mall, eating out at a restaurant, or attending a school activity, Redskins found things to occupy their spare time.

The Summer Concert Series featuring Van Halen, Huey Lewis, Yes, and Ozzy in concert at the Coliseum was a big hit. Other people went to the Sunday Night Jams at Frieman Square.

Redskins went to see "Romancing the Stone", "Gremlins", "Purple Rain", and other movies.

Enthusiasts went to Diamond Jim's and Putt-Putt for miniature golf, go-karts, or video games. Laser video games, like "Dragon's Lair" and "Space Ace", were the latest wonders of modern technology.

From the armchair athletes who went to the Komet hockey games to the dancers who went to the Casbah, Redskins were a diverse group of individuals.

Dave Randall, sophomore, navigates the corner at Diamond Jim's.

Shelly Neal, freshman, demonstrates the proper putting technique.

Vinnie Williams, junior, ruthlessly hunts spies with the aid of John Cowan.

Boredom bug strikes again

That deadly bug, the boredom bug, struck again. He was busy, biting 99.9% of the student body. Victims stared into space or just dozed off. The attacks affected the students' perception of time; seconds became minutes and minutes became hours. The most popular antidote, used by both teachers and students, was watching the clock.

Nervous habits were another way of coping with the boredom. Cracking knuckles, tapping fingers, and biting nails were symptoms, and they often annoyed students as well as teachers.

'Skins spend time wisely

How do you spend your spare time? Do you sleep in front of the T.V., or do you use it wisely?

Well, despite the high unemployment rate in Fort Wayne, many Redskins were finding various part time jobs throughout the area. Grocery stores and fast food restraunts were very popular places for students to work.

The reasons for working vary. "I work to earn enough money for school clothes," said Kandie Elliott, sophomore. "I work to earn money for gas and dates," said Chris LaSalle, junior.

Other Redskins provided domestic services such as babysitting, mowing lawns, etc. These students helped out individual families when they were needed. Freshman Beth Martz enjoyed her babysitting job because, "I like the kids I watch, but I really like the money."

Money and experience motivated North Side students into the working world. Scott Zion, junior, shows his special technique on breading chicken.

Nicole Armstrong, junior, is always eager to help satisfy her customers.

Redskin life centers on food

Fast food restraunts maintained their popularity or perhaps even gained some because of their catchy tunes and slogans "Where's the beef?" seemed to fit many situations. The fast service was great for those quick drives to Wendy's during lunch periods.

Such places also provided an inexpensive way to get together with friends and dates. A quarter pound hamburger varied from $1.19 at Wendy's to about $1.30 at McDonalds. A regular order of fries cost anywhere from $.50 to $.69.

In a year when extra spending money was scarce, what could have been better and cheaper than an evening out at McDonald's after the big game?

Cheryl Geradot, junior, can hardly wait to get her hands on the delicious pan pizza.

Math offers variety

The math department strived to offer a wide variety of classes for students with different abilities. There were honors programs for those who wanted to study in depth and, for students who planned on going to college but did not want to study in depth, college prep classes were available. On the other hand, if students just wanted to learn how to apply mathematics in their daily lives, they could also take general math classes.

"This year we're working on making general math more meaningful," commented Robert Lovell, head of the department. In addition, hand calculators were being introduced in the classes. The variety of classes also benefited the freshmen, who were required by the state law to take two years of math.

Science offered new option

The Advanced Placement Program, a new addition to the science curriculum, was open to students of Advanced Chemistry, Advanced Biology and Physics. This optional course offered eligible students majoring in sciences to earn college credits. The students prepared for this by studying independently in addition to regular classroom work. In the spring the students took a test that determined the amount of credits earned.

Offered by the Science Department was a variety of awards. The Bausch and Lomb, Kramer, Thomas Chemistry and Earth Science awards were given to those students exhibiting special talent in the specific science areas.

The purpose of the Science Department was to prepare students for careers in sciences and medicine. On a broader view, "We hoped to give the students an appreciation and awareness of their surroundings, and to get them to think critically about the things around them," explained Mr. Mark Tipple.

New rules improve work

The English Department changed both the curriculum and textbooks. This resulted in some classes covering the same materials as they did the year before. For instance, the seniors studied English literature and the juniors studied American literature over again. One thousand seven hundred eight students were enrolled in English classes, an enrollment that reflected the new state requirement that students take four years of English.

"No rules in English are too strict. They were made to improve the quality of the students' work." said Mrs. Kathleen Neuhaus, head of the English Department.

Mrs. Marsha Flora, a new teacher at North Side said, "I think it's an organized department because North Side has a good department head. It is the first department that I have been in where everyone has a say in how the English money is spent."

Besides the usual English classes, the department also offered other classes. Speech classes available for those who wanted to develop the fundamentals of public speaking and communication. Humanities was a study of art, literature, and music that tied people together. Students who were interested in learning about and working with instructional media could apply to take the literary experience class, and for those who wanted to learn how to write the different forms of literature, creative writing classes were available.

Alan Witchey, junior, gets some pointers on how to write a good gothic story from Mrs. Marsha Flora, a new English teacher.

Social Studies changes texts

Preparations for the coming year were being made by the Social Studies Department. Among them were new textbooks as required by the state of Indiana for every six years. The procedures, though, were different compared to six years ago. The state did less screening than before, which meant more books to select from.

"I think it's an attempt to allow more local control," said Mr. Don Evans, head of the Social Studies Department.

Computer software also made its way into the social studies classrooms. Computer simulation and programing were used by the students for drill and review.

"It's another approach to learning," said Mr, Evans.

Among classes offered in the department was U.S. History. Students took the class their junior year to satisfy the state's requirement. During their senior year, they were required to take a one semester of government and a one semester of applied economics, economics, psychology, or sociology.

New options in classes were also being considered by the department. For instance, the department thought of having dual credits for both high school and college. This meant that professors from colleges would come in to teach at North Side.

"We're quite busy with the previewing of new materials that promote student involvement for the coming six years," said Mr. Evans.

Students learn with hands

The Industrial Arts Department was unique in that the students learned through working with their hands. Many students liked Industrial Arts because they could move around and did not have to sit in their desks reading books all the time. They also liked the fact that their work contributed something to the school. "The department offers practical training for those students who are not as academically inclined as others," said Mr. Mark Boynton, graphic Electronics arts and teacher.

Graphic arts was one of the classes in the department. It was a course that provided the students with an opportunity to survey and explore the printing industry, its occupations and material processes. Students completed major projects for the school yearbook, Student Council, Key Club, and many other groups.

New books make debut

New textbooks made their "debut" in the Foriegn Language Department. Mrs. Donna Reithmiller, head of the department, said the textbooks had a lot of good material and that, "It's nice to try something different." On the other hand, some students said the new books were more difficult because the answers were not included.

One-third of the student body was involved in the program. Students could take French, Spanish, Latin, German, or a one semester course of Japanese. For those who wanted to expand their vocabulary by studying word derivation, Word Power was available.Opportunities for travel to foreign countries were available via American Field Services and other clubs and organizations.

Audio equipment helped students practice pronunciation and gave them a chance to hear a foreign language spoken correctly. Students also learned pronunciation through listening to their teachers.

Learning about free enterprise

"Free enterprise, a challenge to excellence." Those were the words used by Mr. Richard Irving to describe the basis of DECA. DECA helped students who were interested in marketing or those pursuing a career in business. Students learned about the free enterprise system.

Sophomores, juniors, and seniors were able to enroll in DECA classes with each year dealing with a different part of the free enterprise system.

Students gained on the job learning experiences through various jobs held throughout the city.

DECA studies free enterprise

"DECA helped me understand the concept of marketing and the free enterprise system," said senior Wendy Beck.

In senior DECA students learned about running a business and the responsibilities it involves.

"This country is like no other. The only limit of opportunity is that which you place on yourself," commented Mr. Richard Irving.

The students also competed against other schools in various aspects of business. The winner advanced to the national competition in May in San Francisco.

'Skins work and learn

RVS, or Regional Vocational School, was a program open to those 135 students not anticipating college.

The RVS program was a valuable part of the Fort Wayne Community schools, because it gave the student training in vocational areas, and sometimes helped get the student a job.

The program had eleven classes available, ranging from automotive to horticulture. To be eligible a student must have enough credits to leave for half a day.

Business helped 'Skins

A wide variety of business courses was available for students persuing a career in business as well as for those who wanted to just study business basics. Classes for students ranging from beginner to advanced included typing, shorthand and accounting. Business Law, Recordkeeping and Consumer Education, as examples, were open to various students.

Of the 1,189 students total 356 were enrolled in Personal Keyboard Typing while the others chose other classes.

Computers, a recent addition to the department, were used by many students. Students in Cooperative Office Education, Secretarial Practice and Clerical Practice used these computers for wordprocessing. In addition, the department expected to receive next year several micro-computers to be used by beginning typists.

Mr. Keith Fisher, department head, summarized the purpose of the Business Department. "Our main goal is basically to prepare students for jobs in the future."

Students have special needs

"Special education is a program designed to help students with individual needs," said Mrs. Laura Megles-Biesiada, teacher. Other teachers were Mr. Jack Ribel, Mrs. Dennise Ellinger, and Mrs. Beth Stillwell. Approximately ninety students were in special education.

parents, teachers, Either students requested that individuals be in special education. Students had to be tested by Mrs. Edwards, psychometrist, and had to have permission of their parents before being allowed in the classes. Among the subjects that they took history, English, math, health. Special government, and education students usually attended two of the classes and also attended classes with other students.

"I really appreciate the teachers' cooperation, understanding, and how they accepted the students into their classrooms," said Mrs. Megles-Biesiada.

Special education classes were made up of three different types of students: the emotionally handistudents with learning capped, and the mentally disabilities, handicapped. The program provided students with individual by helping them successful at school and preparing them for experiences after high school.

P.E. offers new choices

Many new and exciting choices were available in physical education. Freshmen and sophomores especially given the opportunity to participate in either individual or "individuals" team sports. The accomplished such things as archery, swimming or tennis-10 sports in all. The team sports enthusiasts ganged up for everything from flag football to whiffle ball and played on seven different teams by the end of the semester. According to Mr. Robert Taliaferro, physical education department head, the students favored softball, volleyball, basketball, flag football and swimming.

An advanced elective course was available for juniors and seniors. Mr. Taliaferro estimated 170 students enrolled. The advanced students had a new choice, advanced lifesaving, which included cardiopulmonary resuscitation and first aid lessons. To get involved in this class a student had to have good swimming abilities and had to have passed freshman and sophomore physical education class.

Curt Selby, senior, displays great technique while keeping his eye on the soccer ball.

Staffs share responsibilities

Students of journalism worked hard to produce North Side's two publications, the Northerner and the Legend. The publication room seemed always to contain sounds of type-writers, student conversations, computer printing, and sometimes chaos. Students of both staffs knew all too well that everyone had something to do and then some.

The Northerner staff published the weekly school newspaper. However, the Legend family, in order to meet their final deadline of producing a spring yearbook, had several printing deadlines throughout the year.

The experience these students gained could prove to be beneficial in future jobs. They learned to unite their talents for a specific task. In addition, they learned to get along with one another and to share in responsibilities.

Students boost creativity

Home Economics classes involving 230 students covered a broad range of topics. Housing, as as example, taught the basics of good housekeeping for for individuals and families. Included in the study were discussions and projects on homes, marriage, designing a dream house, selecting furniture, and color art principles.

Human Development evolved around the reproduction and behavior of humans. Everything from the time of conception to adulthood was discussed. Favorite subjects of interest were dating and marriage as well as child behavior. Furthermore, students brought to school children of different ages to monitor the children's reaction to a new environment.

Clothing classes were available for beginner, intermediate and advanced sewing students. Projects included the construction of such gamments as pants, skirts, blouses and blazers in addition to needlecraft projects. Experimenting with different fabrics allowed creativity and variety in the students' work. However, the highlight of the course was a fashion show in which the students displayed their work of art.

Food classes involved basic overall skill in cookery. Mrs. Dorthy Coplen and Mrs. Martha Moore demonstrated preparations of various kinds of foods. Advanced students organized and prepared a Thanksgiving buffet and Christmas dinner as well as holiday open houses.

Art history offers credits

A highlight in the art department was a history class that offered college credits. The students who were enrolled had the same homework and class notes as a college class, and at the end of the term they took a test to see how many credits would be received.

Three photography classes were also included in the curriculum. These classes, as beginning groups, offered the same things: The basic knowledge of a 35mm camera and the fundamentals of black and white darkroom procedure. All students provided their own 35mm cameras.

Ten other art classes available ranged from beginning art to painting, clay, and fibers. According to Mr. Bruce Massoth, department head, the students were graded on their ability as well as individual progress and creativity.

Becky Moreano and Kris Fiorentine put much creativity into their weaving projects.

Students enjoy working with crafts.

Speech builds confidence

"Speech class helped me to develop self-confidence," said Junior Kathy Sullivan.

In speech class, students expressed their thoughts and ideas through many discussions ranging from school issues to the national government. They also gave speeches which were either demonstrative, persuasive, or informative. Students were acquainted with each other through interviewing and introducing each other.

'My objective is to get students to be able to express their thoughts and ideas in front of anyone," said Mrs. Mary Jane Samuel, speech teacher.

Mike Meeks, senior, is pleased to be interviewed by his classmate.

Skip Crouch, senior, checks and adjusts the lighting system.

Enrollment benefits drama

Mrs. Claryn Myers, head of the drama department, felt the rise in enrollment benefited the department. In addition, more boys were involved. North Side had three different drama classes. The beginning drama classes studied fundamentals of every aspect of the theater, whereas, advanced drama students did more acting and began studying directing. Theater arts classes were an orientation to stage crafts, where students learn more of the backstage aspects of the theater.

"Maturity was the only difference between the grade levels," said Myers. "The upperclassmen also know me better and know how much I'll take."

Approximately ten students, including two who had already graduated, went to New York City at the end of the school year. The group saw four plays, took backstage tours, and had discussions with the performers of the plays.

Of her career in drama, Mrs. Myers said, "I've been involved in the theater since I was eight years old. I never intended to teach drama. I was more interested in teaching speech classes."

Paul Bennett, junior, is busy creating props for the stage.

Michelle Sutto, alias Miss Leslie, and Uncle Stanley are drowning their sorrows away.

Newton Fuller, played by Randy Ream, is stunned by the news that he can keep the house after destroying it.

Audience enjoys play

Excitement, props, costumes, and hard work all went into the presentation of the fall play "George Washington Slept Here." The production of the play began in Mrs. Claryn Myers' drama class. The purpose of the play was to give the students a chance to act on stage and build confidence in themselves. The characters were chosen by Mrs. Myers, who had some difficulty in choosing the students for the parts.

"There were some very good people who tried out that I could not use." said Mrs. Myers.

The participants had to make sacrifices with approximately sixty hours of rehearsals, not including construction of the stage. The money collected from the sale of tickets went toward scripts, props, and other production expenses like the cleaning bill.

Although the comments from students were positive, the only regret was not having had a large enough audience.

"We never get enough people to attend the plays as we would like, but the ones that did attend this play enjoyed it." said Mrs. Myers.

Mrs. Fuller, played by Emily May, greets Madge's friends.

Lisa Henry, alias Madge, tells her parents all her sorrows.

"A cheerleader has to have a lot of school spirit and be willing to work really hard," said Miss Vicki Reed, sponsor.

Other qualifications were also required. Α cheerleader maintain at least a "C" average on her report card. In addition, good citizenship, ability to work with others, and coordination required.

Before trying out as a cheerleader, one must be recommended and evaluated by teachers, and go through an interview with Mr. Duane Brown. directory, athletic Mr. John Grantham, assistant athletic director and counselor, and Miss Reed. After that came the actual trying out.

cheerleaders prepared themselves during the summer. They must attend all the games assigned unless they were sick or had an emergency. Cheerleaders boost the team's morale through their support and encouragement.

The Powder Puff game was won by the juniors, and the sophomores defeated the freshmen in the tug-of-war. After the game was a pep session, included a bonfire and fireworks. The hall decorations and the spirit displayed throughout the week all lead to the seniors winning the peace pipe.

Basketball, volleyball, and floor hockey are all sports open for intramural activities.

Intramurals met in the morning before school where students, who have signed up, play against each other. The instructor, Mr. Ry Taliaferro, coaches and officiates the teams.

Volleyball had more students participate than the other sports. The program worked well this year. There was a lot of participation.

Experience paces performance

For the first time in North Side's history, the varsity football team captured the SAC, sectional, and regional titles. Experience was the key factor for the great success of the team.

"I felt that our team had a lot of experience and a lot of talent," said Tim Moore.

The leadership of the twenty-four seniors was also a key factor for the success. Among the seniors who were named to the All-SAC team were James Woodfin, Bill Miller, Tony Leto, John Sewell, Al Jackson, Tim Moore, Ron Jesch, and Robb Trowbridge.

"The experienced seniors showed good leadership throughout the season along with the fact that they were also talented," said Tony Leto.

James Woodfin added "We had so much talent. With that much talent anybody can do well."

Another factor that contributed to the success of the team was the fans. There were over 6,000 people in attendance during the homecoming game against Snider. Students helped to boost the team's morale with various spirit weeks. The band also helped by playing "Chief Mac" whenever the team was behind.

made a great comeback by defeating Penn, the defending state champions, in the opening playoff game and then went on to beat Carmel in overtime to capture the regional title. They ended the season with an outstanding record of 12-1 after losing to Hobart in the semi-state finals.

"I think that everything went as well as expected. I was very pleased and I am proud of what our seniors have accomplished," said Coach Dale Doerffler.

Mr. Doerffler, as well as the whole school, was very proud of the football team, who gave North Side great moments to be remembered for a long time.

The reserve and freshmen teams did well with records of 5-3 and 7-1 respectively. The reserve team started out great with a 5-0 record, but lost the last 3 games due to injuries and some players taken up to varsity.

"For the talent we had available, I think that we did very well. We lacked a little size on both the defense and offensive lines, but for what we lacked in size, we made up in intensity," said Dan Leto about the reserve team.

Runners best ever

"This was the second time in the past eleven years that the men's cross country team went to the regionals, and it was the highest they had ever finished in the conference," said Coach Miller.

Brian Mettler, Jude Roeger, and Mike Carl were the top runners in the varsity division. The co-captains were Trent Buchan, Kleinhans. Jude Roeger, varsity, and Andy Downs, reserve were the most improved this year.

Coach Miller said, 'This was an above average season and, lots of records were broken. We got seventh in the regionals and, the top four runners went to semi-state."

There were thirty runners and only five were seniors, so next year we should have an experienced team.

Laura Martin, senior, made all-SAC her first year out for the team. Cindy Gieseking, jumior, was named the most valuable and the most determined runner of the team. Sue Webb, senior, was captain.

Mr. Mosser liked the idea of getting to know his students outside of class. Tami Siler, sophomore, added, "The team stuck together and helped each other through the season."

The season was quite successful. "Espirit de corps" and improvements in skills were noticeable accomplishments in the ten players. Nominated as most valuable was Deanna Krouse.

According to Laura Meigles-Beisada, freshman coach, the most difficult game was the fifth match of the day at the freshman tournament against Wayne.

"We just didn't have enough left to defeat a very good Wayne team," said Laura Meigles-Beisada, freshman coach.

Paula Lydy, senior, made the all-area girls' golf team and honorable mention went to Pam Lydy and Pam Elliot, seniors.

"We were so successful this year because we had extremely balanced scores among the players," said Coach Ted Crum, who won the all—area coach of the year.

"Mr. Crum taught us everything we know. Most of us had never even picked up a golf club before," said Pam Lydy. "We'll miss him, he was like a dad to us."

"There was a lot of competition this year, and we didn't come on as strong as we should have. Unfortionately we lost a string of games in the second half of the season," said Coach By Hey.

The reserve teamed fared better with a season of 11-7.

"Despite the 5-9 record, I feel the team made a lot of progress during the season," said Steve Smethers, coach of freshmen boys basketball.

Although the team did not have a winning season, some of the players were outstanding. The high scorers were Tom Anspach, 98 points, Tom Smith, 66 points, and Dave Riley, 65 points.

The team succeded in defeating Huntington North, Snider, Bishop Luers, and Elmhurst twice.

Chris Bower said," Even though we had a losing record, we tried our hardest and had fun."

Depth, maturity help team

Tumbles, flips and twists seemed to be the forte of the gymnastics team. Incorporated into improved routines, such moves allowed the team to capture the Summit Athletic Conference title. In addition, team member Pam Reese broke a North Side all-around record by obtaining a total of 36.5 points during the meet with Homestead.

According to Mr. Mike Morris, coach, the success of his team lay in the team members themselves. Even though they were not expecting to win they prepared conference, themselves well and entered the competion with a mature attitude. Depth, as shown by Kathy Didier, also was a key role that led the team to a 12-1 record. They lost to Homestead, the only team to have beaten North in the past three years. Furthermore, difficulty creativity in routines added winning touch.

The team also planned goals for next year. The state championship was high on their list of priorities, for the team felt that their maturity would be a key factor in helping them to reach that goal.

Pam Reese said, "There's always room for improvement. If we take a class or two in the summer and stay in shape, we'll be even better next year."

Johnny Sewell won the heavyweight championship with a record of 30 to 1. Junior Jim Stoltz followed by making it to state with a record of 28 to 3 in the 185-pound division. Both John Gogos, junior, and Keith Beghtel, freshman, advanced to the semi-state level in their weight division.

"It's an honor to win state. It's an honor to win the state title for anyone who didn't think they could do it. And from what I have accomplished anything you set your mind to you can do it," comments Sewell.

Peers sponsor programs

Peer Facilitators was a special group of students trained to help others with various problems.

This year, the members worked a great deal with younger students. For instance, Peers tutored elementary students. In addition, they assumed a kind of big brother/sister role.

Peers also contributed something to North Side. They put up bulletin boards containing newspaper articles about the school's students and atletic events. Furthermore, Peers sponsored the "Lunch With a Giant" program in which a person in the community came to discuss careers and lifestyles to interested students.

The members learned to listen and help each other. The experience they gained from the various jobs they did was great. Moreover, there was a special openness between this group of special students.

Computer logo studied

Computer Club was an extension of computer classes. The club was established for those students with a genuine interest in computers and who wanted to further their knowledge on the subject.

The students met once a month to work on projects. Occasionally, there were guest speakers as well as field trips.

Members benefitted by learning to solve difficult problems through computer programs. There was also room for an increase in the student's creativity.

New ploys learned

"Checkmate" was the word members of Chess Club knew all too well. As a matter of fact, Nick Adams, senior, received his Master's rating, which named him one of the top 25 students in the nation at playing chess.

There was more to Chess Club than just playing chess. Chess problems had to be solved and clever strategies had to be planned. There were "openings" and other various ploys.

Although competition remained mostly between the members themselves, Mr. Dave Bierbaum, the club's sponsor, hoped at some future date to compete with other schools.

So, for those who thought chess was just another board game, Mr. Bierbaum had this message.

"Chess was to checkers like soccer was to football."

Hostess Club gives good will

About five years ago, several girls who had been working at athletic events decided to organize the Athletic Hostess Club. The club was established with the idea that every member try her best to create an ambience of warmth and welcome for spectators and guests.

The criteria for each member was not always easy to meet. When the girls joined the club, they made a faithful commitment to do the various jobs assigned to them at athletic events. Each member had to be kind and courteous at all times. More importantly, they had to be dependable whenever there was a need.

Although the experience of working with others was great, members agreed, their goal of good will stood above the rest.

AFS enriches culture, travel

American Field Services, AFS, was an organization established to further foreign cultural exchanges by allowing students to travel to different lands. The club gave its members an opportunity to meet others of a foreign culture.

Events on the agenda included popluck parties in which foods of a specific culture were served, "rap sessions" where foreign exchange students told of experiences encountered in different countries, and the popular ice-skating party.

Both exchange students and North Side benefitted from AFS. AFS sent exchange students to North Side. Thus, North Side had the opportunity to enrich itself culturally through the foreign students. ## 'Earn while you learn'

What better motto for the Office Education Association (OEA) than, "Earn while you learn"? Eighteen seniors, headed by Mrs. Sandra Macy, were involved in OEA. The members went to school half a day and worked the other half. All students that belonged to OEA had to take the Cooperative Office Education (COE) class, where there was a meeting every Friday.

Some of the activities planned by OEA were a booth at the Halloween party, trips to nursing homes, employer-employee luncheons, secretarial-business contest, and a project helping with the Special Olympics. Through students received а hands-on experience in the business world still going to school.

"It's a nice club to be in. It's fun to travel with the club and the contests are exciting," said Shirley Bennett, president of OEA.

FSA promotes understanding

"It's good for them," said Mrs. Irma Johnson, about the Future Secretaries Association (FSA). "FSA encouraged students in the secretarial field to have a better understanding of the profession."

The club had eighteen students who were in advanced shorthand or FSA. A candlelight initiation each year introduced elected officers to their responsibilities. They were also invited to many dinners and educational seminars. major highlight was the senior breakfast with the Tawasi Chapter of Professional Secretaries Incorperated (PSI).

FSA was visited by many guest speakers who were involved in the business world. One such speaker was Mrs. Sharon Huff, coordinator of PSI, who came to every meeting. The group often took field trips to different companies to see their offices and to talk with the scretaries. Lincoln Life Insurance was among some of the companies they visited.

Service crew important asset

Service workers were an important asset to teachers and other school personnel. Over fifty students gave their services each day. Their daily duties included helping other students, delivering messages, and collecting attendance slips.

Originally, these service workers were students in study hall. However, with so many minor jobs to be done, these students gave up their study hall time to lend a helping hand.

Service worker Scott Carcillo, senior, comments, "It's a better way to spend my time than sitting around and talking in study hall."

Afro fosters brotherhood

The Afro Club was started in the 1970's when human relations in schools were needed.

"It's a good group for students to express their concerns, which they probably wouldn't express in school," said Mrs. Lizzie Epps, guidance counselor.

There were about twenty involved in the Afro Club. The group planned many activities each year. Just a few of them were a fashion show, visits to nursing homes, and a booth at the Halloween party.

The club was open to anyone, of any race, interested in race relations in school. The group met once a week before school, making a twenty-five cent dues payment each week. Their main goal was to foster brotherhood among the students within the school system.

"Our purpose is to bring all students together, not just the black culture," said Natalie Simmons, president of the Afro Club. She also added "At the beginning of each school year, we establish an academic goal and work toward reaching that goal."

Visitors gain experience

Charles Dadvisard, an exchange student from France, came to the United States because he thought it would be a good experience to leave his family and be independent for a year.

"It's very hard to come to a country where I don't know anything about," he said. "I only know about America through pictures in magazines.

Coming to Fort Wayne was not exactly what he had expected. "Pictures in magazines do not show the American people and their way of life," he said.

Although Fort Wayne cannot compare to Paris, Charles still appreciated his experience here. He especially appreciated the relationship between teachers and students at North Side. He thought that this was a good example for other countries to follow.

Charles is the youngest in the family. He has one brother and two sisters. His mother was an interior designer. He enjoys any kind of sport that deals with water. He would like to pursue a career in communication, fashion design, or acting. Although he likes the United States, he still preferred France.

"I am French and I want to stay French," Charles said.

One of the two exchange students from West Germany is Christian Schroeer. Christian lives in Duisbury. He has two brothers. His mother is a teacher and his father is a college president. Education is very important to him. He was chosen to come to the United States free of charge due to his good grades and a personal interview.

"Germany is different from America in every way," Christian said. For instance, the schools in Germany do not have competitive sports. In addition, the schools are also in session six days a week instead of five days.

"I'm very happy that I got a chance to come here. I hope that other Americans could get the chance to go over to Germany or other countries in Europe," he said. "I thought it was a good experience to meet a lot of people," said Rikka Harkonen, Finnish exchange student, about coming to the United States. Rikka has two sisters. Her older sister had been in the United States before. Her mother is a school teacher and her father is an engineer. She enjoys music, dancing, gymnastics, and down-hill skiing.

One of the reasons why she likes North Side is because it is bigger than her school in Finland.

"I can choose so many different subjects here, like dance," she said. Among the subjects that she is taking are German and English. She also speaks Swedish. She has visited many countries in Europe, including Sweden, Italy, Greece, Spain, and England. Rikka will especially be remembered by her friends as the girl who loves to eat.

Britta Thomas, an exchange student from Hennlef, West Germany, has one sister. She stayes with the family of Rochelle Brown, junior. Britta likes to listen to music and expecially loves the music channel, MTV. Among two of her favorite groups are Saga and Supertramp.

Back home in Hennlef she took many language classes in English, French, and Latin. With four years of English, she has no trouble communicating with other students. Her favorite sarcastic saying was "Fine!"

Speech crew overcomes fear

Lisa Henry, senior, practices reciting her speech.

People afraid of speaking either large audiences or small groups learned to overcome such through the Speech Club.

Speech was a competative club. Members competed with speech clubs of other schools. This competition extended into sectionals, regionals and, finally, state. Mrs. Claryn Myers, drama teacher, coached each student on a free—time basis.

Students of Speech benefitted in several ways. They increased their abilities in writing and presenting a good speech. More importantly, their self-esteem and confidence were boosted.

Group applies acting forms

For students who had an interest in drama, Thespians was a great way to learn the application of dramatic skills.

Thespians was an extacurricular activity that enabled students to get together to practice the forms and processes of good acting. Mrs. Claryn Myers, drama teacher, sponsored the club. However, because of her hectic schedule with other work, she admitted, 'The students pretty much ran things themselves.

According to Skip Crouch, senior, "Thespians gave a great deal of insight about what the theater arts are all about."

Key crew helps raise funds

The Key Club, sponsored by Mr. Merle Rice and Mr. Neal Putt, was a service organization designed to help other organizations that were in need of money. Cystic Fibrosis and Big Brothers/Big Sisters were organizations that requested the club's help in raising funds.

The members planned projects such as preparing Christmas baskets for needy North Side families, sending various members to the state convention, and writing the popular North Side Key, a listing of addresses and phone numbers of North Side students.

Students trace family history

In the past, many efforts had been made to establish a genealogy club, but up until two years ago, there was very little success. However, today, students who had a desire to research their family history were a part of Genealogy Club.

The general meetings were held at school periodically. Once a month, the members would congregate at the main public library to acquire information on their progenitors. Later, back at school, the students shared with each other various facts that they had found.

As a benefit, this club offered a personal satisfaction to its members. The students were often elated when they found interesting information, such as a great relative having had fought in the Civil War.

According to Mr. Myron Henderson, the club's sponsor, 'Getting the information was a lot like detective work and puzzle solving. However, it's fun to see a student find something."

Leaders help in community

Project Lead was a volunteer organization that taught students leadership skills and getting involved in the community. The members often choose an area in the community that they considered to be a "trouble spot" and undertook the necessary steps to improve it.

The two major projects involved working with elderly people and elementary students. The first was a crime prevention project. The members went to various places throughout the city to talk to elderly people on how not to become victims of crime. These seminars included the showing of movies, distribution of pamphlets, and demostrations.

The other, Larch Key Kids, evolved because of the concern over children who stay alone at home until a parent arrives. Basically, the members wanted to find out the needs of these children and tried to help.

Learning leadership skills and how to get along with other people were two major benefits. Others included learning good planning and organization skills and dealing with the real world.

"Project Lead is one of the best things that ever happened to me," declared Alan Witchey, jumior.

Council plans events

Student Council's agenda included many events. Theses were a Halloween party, homecoming week, the blood bank, and the Toys-for-Tots collection. However, the highlight of the year was the Junior/Senior prom.

Members had several responsibilities. They had to attend meetings, make plans, participate in planned events, and basically just helped out whenever needed. Susan Klinger, president, explained, "If you're a member you have responsibilities, not just to Student Council, but also to your class."

Despite the hard work, Student Council had its benefits. According to Don Roberts, junior class president, "It was fun and it's a good way to meet a variety of people." Corey Mettler, freshman class president summed up his council experience, "It was a challenge."

Students sandbag for safety

Redskins pulled together to help save North Side and the city of Fort Wayne in the flood of 1985. Many students volunteered to sandbag both at North Side and the downtown flood stations.

"I was really surprised to see so many students sandbag at North Side. I didn't really think anyone cared that much. It made me proud to be from North Side," said Becky Hill, junior.

Besides student volunteers, the faculty and staff of North Side also contributed their time and energy to help save the city from the high flood waters.

"Teaching is hard on the brain, but not hard on the muscles. I was so sore from sandbagging," said Miss Melinda Stewart, teacher.

Due to past experiences in the flood of 1982, North Side did not receive much damage in 1985. Precautions were taken by placing sandbags along North Side Drive to protect the stadium gym and the computer system was also shut down.

Although students missed four days of school, they did not have to make up for the time.

"I'm glad that we didn't have to make up these days at the end of the year because I couldn't stand another four extra days in school," said Linda Raftree, junior.

The flood of 1985 brought Redskins and the people of the city together. Most importantly, it showed that success comes from teamwork. Redskins demonstrated this by their determination and enthusiasm to help save North Side as well as Fort Wayne.

Music

Success takes time, effort

After competing at the Marching Bands of America Grand Nationals in Indianapolis, the band placed seventeenth. Two hundred six drummers, horn players, flag twirlers, and dancers all joined together to achieve this success.

"I think the success is due to the fact that the band is like a big family. Everyone accepted constructive criticism from other members of the band," said Andrea Burke, senior.

The success of the band was also due to the time and effort contributed by the band members. The band practiced a minimum of fifteen hours a week.

"I sacrificed my time because I love the feeling of accomplishment at the end of a performance when the crowd applauds," said Krissy Sullivan, junior.

The directing staff also had a great deal to do with the success of the band. They sacrificed much of their time putting together a great performance. Mr. Ed King, band director, dedicated much of his time, in fact, twelve years, to the marching band. The band members showed their appreciation to Mr. King by giving him a trombone.

"He spends so much time with us and helps us with our problems. He is like my second dad," said Elaina Stephens, senior.

Andrea Burke, senior, shows how practice results in excellence.

Pam Hinkle, senior, and Tammy Schinbeckler, sophomore, lead the band out for pre-game entertainment.

Jeff Adams, Kim Shippy, Dan Baker, and Denise Langwell, seniors, demonstrate the style and pride of being drum majors.

Craig Johnson, senior, leads the trumpet players through his experience and talent.

The drum line concentrates intensely on keeping the beat for the band.

Mr. Larry Kenner, assistant band director, runs the flags through practice drills.

CLASS OF 1985

1985 Staff

When putting together the 1985 yearbook, the Legend staff tried to keep in mind that there are 1800 students at North Side, not just the popular ten or twenty from each class.

However, with only 168 pages in the book, it was not an easy task to include everyone. We hope that in these pages there are pictures of friends or events that will trigger fond and meaningful memories in years to come when you look through these pages.

The staff was young and inexperienced, but they put forth their best efforts. Many long days and nights were involved in putting together the Legend.

There is an endless list of people

I wish to thank. From those granting interviews to those North Side supporters who bought ads in the Legend, and all those who freely gave a helping hand in any way possible. "thank you" goes to Miss Norma Thiele who endured the late nights, as well as the early mornings on upcoming deadlines. Her guidance and expertise in journalism eased the heavy work load involved in putting a yearbook together. But most of all I would like to thank my editors: Dugan Hoffmann, Mary Jo Baney, Mylien Hoang, and Natalie Simmons, who offered much help and support at the worst of times.

Sincerely,

Fran Murphy
